

Christine Amyes

- Coach, organisational development practitioner and facilitator
- My core values: making a difference, trust and ethics
- Clients find me: supportive, empathetic, challenging and pragmatic
- Favourite pastime: walking in Wales or the Greek islands

I have more than 20 years' experience as a coach and facilitator and have worked extensively across the public and private sector, helping to build great organisations and maximise the impact that people have. I have a degree in professional training and development, am a trained coach supervisor and hold a post graduate qualification in the psychology of coaching. I have a wealth of hands-on experience gained as a consultant and as a senior manager in a successful company. I am also a Fellow of the Chartered Institute of Personnel and Development.

I was deputy chief executive at the New Charter Group, a social housing business based in Tameside, Greater Manchester. Whilst there, I was responsible for Corporate Services, including HR, organisational development, business transformation, communications, legal and governance.

I left New Charter to become an independent consultant and non-executive director of Great Places Housing Group and a board member of Girls Out Loud, a charity that empowers and inspires teenage girls to have confidence, self-belief, emotional resilience and a positive self-image. I coach senior managers, work with senior teams and am Chair of Governors at a high performing secondary school in Rochdale.

I am married with two grown-up daughters and a beautiful granddaughter who has brought much joy into our lives. My work life balance is important to me and enjoy spending time with family, visiting new places and walking in the beautiful North Wales countryside, hills and coastline. This means that I am energised, ready and excited about working with clients and organisations to help maximise their potential.
